

Skiers found a weak layer on an ice crust about a foot under the surface at Bacon Rind on Saturday. This is not a widespread issue, but it worth looking for since an ice crust would be easy to feel with a simple poke of a ski pole or swipe of your hand. Photo: H. Morrical

Advisory Region
Southern Madison

Forecast link: GNFAC Avalanche Forecast for Tue Feb 21, 2017

